Now playing at a cozy home theater near you any time

If you have a flick freak in your family, and who doesn't, here's a gift that's better than the plant-of-the-of-the-month clubs Film Movement's Independent-Film-of-the-Month Club.

Each month, the Film Movement subscriber gets a DVD to own of a first-run award-winning independent or foreign film, sometimes within days of its theater release.

The films are selected by renowned board of curators, including Nicole Guillemet, Sundance Film Festival's the original programmer, Christian Gates of the American Film Institute and Richard Pena of the Film Society of Lincoln Center, to name a few.

The monthly DVD also comes with a short film from a hot new director. It's been compared to "having an entire film festival delivered to your door, one picture per month."

Subscriptions are available in three, six or 12-month memberships, for $13.95 per monthly DVD package, which is a special holiday discount of 20 percent off.

Some of the selections have included "The Party's Over," starring Philip Seymour Hoffman, "Long Life, Happiness and Prosperity," starring Sandra Oh, Sundance Film Festival winner "Manito," directed by Eric Eason and Brazil's "The Man of the Year," a film festival winner in San Francisco, Toronto and Berlin.
